Report spurs fears about skyrocketing tunnel cost

A document released last week estimated the cost of the tunnel to be $295M During the election, some candidates suggested the cost could reach $500M

On the cusp of decision day for the airport tunnel, two city aldermen said they were presented with a confidential report further inflating their concerns.

According to information received by Metro, the report, released Friday by city administration, states an additional $200 million could be required to build the tunnel, on top of the earlier projection of $295 million.

The report is believed to contain an estimated $2 million for annual operating costs — and four interchanges that may need to be built at a cost of $50 to $70 million each.

"These are the numbers that are out there and there are a lot of numbers in this confidential report that I can't talk about," said Ald. Diane Colley-Urquhart yesterday.

"I'm going to ask that the report be released first thing at 9:30 in the morning."

Colley-Urquhart said she couldn't support the approval of the airport tunnel until she sees a draft of the agreement with the Calgary Airport Authority.

Construction

- Construction of the tunnel would need to begin in April — the same time as the new runway at the airport kicks off construction.
- Last week's report stated that building the tunnel after the runway is set up would cost the city upwards of $1.5 billion.

The city is in negotiations over the amount the airport will receive in the deal.

Ald. Gord Lowe said this recent report has caused him "great angst" and only added to his list of questions.

"It hasn't resolved anything," he said. "In fact, it's just caused grave concern for myself and several of my colleagues."

Despite the concerns, Ald. Jim Stevenson — a longtime advocate of the tunnel — said he's confident his colleagues will give the tunnel a pass.

"I feel we could have 10 votes, or maybe even 11 or 12. It's hard to say. I do believe it will pass." KATIE TURNER

Gas leak leads to evacuation of condo

Fifteen people were evacuated from a condo complex yesterday after reports of a gas leak.

Around 1 p.m., fire crews arrived at the complex, located in the 1800 block of 34 Avenue SW, and found levels of carbon monoxide had reached 125 parts per million. They evacuated the 64-unit, four-storey complex, however none of the evacuated residents showed any symptoms and didn't require EMS.

The displaced residents were kept warm on a Calgary Transit bus. The Calgary Fire Department and Atco Gas are continuing to investigate the source of the carbon monoxide. The fire department is reminding Calgarians to evacuate and call 911 if a person or pet is showing signs of carbon monoxide poisoning.

One of four stabbing victims still in hospital

One of the four victims of a stabbing incident which occurred Saturday on the 600 block of 8 Avenue SW remains in hospital, though his condition is now stable and non-life threatening, according to police.

Four unknown culprits approached the four victims shortly after 2 a.m., according to police. The culprits made a hand gesture towards the victims and when it was ignored, they allegedly attacked the victims — throwing punches and using double-edged weapons to stab the victims. METRO

Northeast area cordoned off amid reports of armed man ◐ Male arrested without injury ◐ Police believe alcohol, drugs may have been factors

JEREMY NOLAIS
@METRONEWS.CA

Residents in Temple watched nervously as dozens of police officers — some armed with rifles — surrounded a house for several hours yesterday amid reports that a "distraught" male was armed with weapons inside.

Calls first came in to police around 12:45 p.m., including one from the individual's father, said Sgt. John McCarthy.

Police learned the male was armed with a knife inside a home in the 5300 block of Temple Road NE and there was also an indication that he may be in possession of firearms, McCarthy said.

Sadie McDougall, who lives nearby, arrived home to a cluster of police cruisers as negotiations with the male continued.

"It's a little bit frightening," said the mother of two small children. "I never thought anything significant could happen like this here."

Insp. Dave Wood said the individual finally surrendered to police around 5 p.m., and police have found no evidence that he was in possession of firearms.

"We are going with what his mother and father told us," Wood said. "That he had a knife and was possibly under the influence of alcohol and possibly on drugs."

At the scene

- Police negotiators and a tactical unit were called in to assist at the scene.
- Business owners in the nearby Temple Crossing shopping centre expressed confusion as the incident unfolded.
- The arrested individual is not believed to have been known by police.

No ouster yet, but reform promised

Concessions placate without giving in to unified opposition's demand — Mubarak's immediate resignation

Egypt's vice-president, Omar Suleiman, met a broad representation of major opposition groups for the first time yesterday.

Suleiman offered new concessions including freedom of the press, release of those detained since anti-government protests began nearly two weeks ago and the eventual lifting of the country's hated emergency laws.

Two groups in attendance said this was only a first step in a dialogue which has yet to meet their central demand — the immediate ouster of longtime President Hosni Mubarak.

"The protest continues because there are no guarantees and not all demands have been met," said Mostafa al-Naggar, a protest organizer and supporter of Mohamed ElBaradei, a Nobel Peace laureate and one of the country's leading democracy advocates.

"We did not sign on to the statement. This is a beginning of a dialogue. We approve the positive things in the statement but ... we are still demanding that the president step down."

The outlawed Muslim Brotherhood, the country's largest opposition group, made a similar statement.

Suleiman offered to form a judiciary committee to study proposed constitutional reforms that would allow more candidates to run for president and impose term limits on the presidency, the state news agency reported. The committee was given until the first week of March to finish the tasks.

The offer also included a pledge not to harass those participating in anti-government protests, which have drawn hundreds of thousands at the biggest rallies. The government agreed not to hamper freedom of press and not to interfere with text messaging and Internet.

The meeting drew the broadest representation of Egypt's fragmented opposition to sit with the new vice-president since the protests began on Jan. 25.

"We are still demanding that the president step down."

Twins missing after father's death

Police in Italy, Switzerland and France searched for six-year-old twin girls yesterday. They disappeared after their father died in an apparent suicide.

The body of Matthias Kaspar Schepp, 43, a Canadian-born resident of Switzerland, was found by a railway station near the southern Italian port city Bari shortly before 11 p.m. on Thursday, according to Swiss police in the canton (state) of Vaud.

Authorities believe Schepp, who was separated from his wife, threw himself under a train. Police in Switzerland, Italy and France are searching for the twin girls, Alessia and Livia, who lived in Lausanne with their mother, Irina Lucidi, 44.

According to Italian news reports, Schepp picked up his daughters from their mother's home on Jan. 28 for the weekend.

Egyptian unrest to set tone on TSX floor

Traders fear political unrest could spread to other oil-rich countries in the region

The tone on the Toronto stock market this week will likely be set by the commodity sectors amid volatile oil prices because of unrest in Egypt and surging copper prices.

In a week of little new economic data, investors will also be looking to a string of earnings reports from Canadian and U.S. corporations.

Oil prices moved up as much as seven per cent last week, closing as high as $92 US as traders worried the Suez Canal could be shut.

But there are doubts those levels can be sustained.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see oil back trading under $90 (this) week, that's my own gut feeling," said John Kurgan at Lind Waldock, noting that oil prices bumped against the $92 level at the start of the year and then with the Egyptian crisis.

Market moment

PRICES AS OF 5 P.M. FRIDAY

DOLLAR	Natural gas 1,000 cu ft
+ 0.26¢ (101.17¢ US)	$4.310 (– 2.7¢)
OIL	Gold contracts
– $1.51 ($89.03 US)	$1,349.00 (– $4.00)
TSX
– 49.5 13,791.85

At the same time, Kurgan added that volatility in oil prices will likely continue.

"This is not something that's going to resolve itself near term," he said. "This is fluid, this is going to take awhile to settle."

On Friday, prices headed down $1.50 to $89.03 a barrel as hopes rose for an end to the political protests in Egypt.

The energy sector benefited from the higher prices, running up 1.6 per cent last week.

The base metals sector finished up a modest 0.65 per cent last week as copper hit new record highs of $4.58 US a pound on higher demand and supply concerns.

"This is strictly a pure supply/demand equation, it's not any fear it's just strong demand for the need of copper everywhere," Kurgan said.

"It's trading at around $4.60 a pound (and) I thought I would never see this sort of level and I've been doing this for 26 years."

Job growth numbers inconsistent

Friday's news that 69,200 jobs were created in January seemed to come out of thin air. The previous month saw a more realistic 22,000 pickup, the month before it was 15,000. Before then, 3,000.

What is generally missing in the coverage of Statistics Canada's most important economic indicator is how wonky each month's number can be. Just last week, the agency had to revise down by 67,000 the number of jobs it had previously reported were created in the months following the recession.

GOOGLE HELPS PEOPLE CONNECT AMID UPRISING

Even before his first day on the job last week at Google, Ujjwal Singh, 38, helped start an online service that enabled Egyptians to bypass government efforts to muzzle the protests there.

Google bought Ujjwal's startup Jan. 25, and a Google product team leader trying to figure out a way around Egypt's recent Internet blackout asked Singh for help before he reported to work.

A weekend of brainstorming and programming later, Speak2Tweet was born — a service that lets people call a phone number and leave a message, then posts a link to the message to Twitter.

By the time Singh started his job last Monday, his service was part of the uprising.

"He designed, built and launched his first product before he started at Google, which is now our all-time record," says Steve Crossan, a Google product manager.

EMOTIONAL PITCH FOR AIRPORT TUNNEL

Urban Compass

JANICE PASKEY

People have an attention span of 9.3 minutes.

After that, you need to provide an "emotional anecdote to keep their attention." So says John Medina, writing in Brain Rules. It's a great book about how people learn.

So here's emotion.

How are we going to get to and from the airport?

Pay attention now, or get very emotional sitting on a jammed Deerfoot while your flight departs without you.

First, we mourn the loss of the airport's road to the south Airport Trail, via Barlow Trail.

It's closing soon. For a new runway.

Yet, most visitors from the airport go south — into our downtown, the commercial centre of the oil patch. Or for tourism to our luxury hotels, shopping and top-notch restaurants.

To the closest LRT link: Whitehorn.

It's the price to pay for a new runway.

Rick Erickson, a consultant who does the airport's economic impact study, says the new runway is needed. It's always been part of the plan. No secret.

The airport is overcapacity, and two planes can't land at the same time. The airport generates one in $10 in Calgary.

As well, he says, the airport gets a bad rap because southern access roads are on airport land, and the airport maintains them. "They don't need anyone's permission to open and close Barlow Trail," says Erickson.

Maybe not, but closing Barlow also destroys the east-west traffic link. The traffic battle shifts north.

That's where Mayor Naheed Nenshi wants an east-west link, or tunnel. Preliminary costs: $300 million. He needs councillors to vote in support.

They should. Or we're headed for a traffic mess and symbolic disenfranchisement. The airport runway will force citizens in its own northeast quadrant to battle to work.

Some call Nenshi's quest for the east-west link "a political decision." This was a campaign promise. So he's building an economic case.

It's stronger than any economic reasons for the current southwest LRT line.

Emotion? Sadness. Disdain. This current project goes to some of the wealthiest neighbourhoods in the city (including our former mayor's own residential area), and still strands Mount Royal University without a link.

We look at demographics: The northeast quadrant is the fastest growing in Calgary, followed by the southeast.

A good traffic link between all our quadrants matters.

Councillors should give Nenshi their support for the airport tunnel; or get ready for an emotional toxic mess of northeast disenfranchisement and traffic gnarl.

And one final note, the Calgary airport authority wisely set aside land for an LRT link to the airport.

If the airport tunnel dies on the table, the focus should shift to this fact.

Metro Minute with Blackjack Comedy

Those suffering from a case of the Mondays might want to pop by Cochrane's Stageline Saloon tonight.

That's because star Canadian comics Mike MacDonald and Matt Billon will be in attendance and packing plenty of jokes as part of their 21-stop Blackjack Comedy Tour. MacDonald has appeared on numerous TV shows, including Late Night With David Letterman and Just For Laughs.

Billon is no slouch himself, having hosted his own special on The Comedy Network and has been featured as a critic on MuchMusic's Video On Trial.

Admission is $12 at the door and the show starts at 8 p.m. The Stageline Saloon is located inside Cochrane's Rockyview Hotel at 3041–St. W. METRO

Rom-coms set to take over the tube

Sorting out the glut of new romantic comedies that will hit the air in the coming weeks

The TV listings are jammed with new romantic comedies (or "rom-coms") set to air in the coming weeks.

The tricky part will be telling them apart. Here's a handy guide.

Perfect Couples
(Thursdays on NBC and Citytv)

Premise: Three couples, all very different, strive for the perfect relationship. None come close.

Stars: Kyle Bornheimer (Worst Week), Christine Woods (FlashForward), Olivia Munn (Attack of the Show!) and Mary Elizabeth Ellis (It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia).

From: One of the executive producers behind Friends, Scott Silveri, who has more or less crammed new actors into old Friends characters and situations and done away with the studio audience.

Distinguishing feature: A fourth couple features a "Bro-mance."

Mad Love
(Premieres tonight on CBS and CTV)

Premise: A comedy about two New Yorkers who fall madly in love and their mutual best friends who despise each other (for now).

Stars: Jason Biggs (the American Pie movies), Sarah Chalke (Scrubs), Tyler Labine (Reaper) and Judy Greer (already a rom-com regular).

Distinguishing feature: Has the most Canadians in the cast (Chalke and Labine).

From: Brother and sister Matt and Jamie Tarses; Matt was a producer on Scrubs, Jamie is a former network executive who helped champion Friends (and is also among the producers of Happy Endings, below).

Happy Endings
(Coming in April on ABC)

Premise: According to the trailer, "a classic story of boy meets girl, boy loses girl to guy on roller blades, boy becomes biggest YouTube sensation since kitten stuck in tuba." A woman ditches a groom at the altar but both remain tight among their posse of six friends.

Stars: Canadian Elisha Cuthbert (24) and Zachary Knighton (FlashForward), Casey Wilson (Saturday Night Live) and Damon Wayans Jr. (son of Damon Wayans, who will guest star).

From: Tarses and newcomer David Caspe.

Distinguishing feature: The only one of these rom-coms with a person of colour in the cast.

Greatest advantage: Unlike the other two, guaranteed to still be around in April.

Criminal style, colourful career

Kirsten Vangsness speaks about her hit show Criminal Minds — and a serendipitous encounter with Tim Curry

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

A veteran theatre actress, California native Kirsten Vangsness got her first big television break in 2005 with Criminal Minds, the FBI procedural on which she plays eccentric, and eccentrically dressed, technical analyst Penelope Garcia.

She spoke with Metro about wardrobe choices, watching herself on screen and picking up guest stars at the gym.

Where did your character's eccentric wardrobe come from?

I dress a little odd, and I think they thought, "Oh, you can kind of pull that off."

If you look at the first couple of episodes of the show, it was pretty calm, and then it gets crazier because she can kind of pull it off and we have good fun. Definitely it's the costume designer. I can pull it off because in real life, I am perfectly comfortable wearing stuff like this.

SUBMITTED

▶ Kirsten Vangsness plays technical analyst Penelope Garcia on Criminal Minds, now in its sixth season.

You've had some great guest stars playing psychopaths on the show, like Tim Curry.

Speaking of Tim Curry, he was at my gym and I was working out one day — this is really how this happened — I'm working out, doing something horrible, I don't know, involving my abdominal muscles, and I hear, "I worship at your throne." (laughs) And I'm like, "I know that voice," and I look up and it's Tim Curry. He's like, "I'm Tim. I want to be on that show," and I was like, "OK ..." And I go to work and I'm like, "Tim Curry wants to be on our show." And they're all, "What? Oh, my God!"

I see him at the gym now all the time. He calls me his agent. And it is the weirdest thing. There's Tim Curry, doing his bicep curls or something.

The show's been going for six years now. How long do you ideally see it going?

As long as it feels fun and as long as these people are here with me to do it. That's my answer.

Zac over Vanessa?

High School Musical star reportedly spotted dirty dancing with Aussie actress

Zac Efron seems to have moved on from Vanessa Hudgens, as the young star was spotted getting frisky with Australian actress Teresa Palmer after a screening of her new film, Take Me Home Tonight, according to E! News.

Efron and Palmer headed to an L.A. nightclub where they took to a VIP table for drinking, dancing and more.

"He was grabbing her butt and doing very suggestive dancing. Then they made out a couple of times standing up where they were dancing. I was surprised they were doing that in front of everyone. It was like they didn't care," a source says."They were there for like an hour and left together."

Tattoo No. 5 for Miley Cyrus

Miley Cyrus, 18, reportedly just got her fifth tattoo, according to People magazine.

The tattoo, on her side under her right arm, is of a dream catcher. "It's a picture of the dream catcher that hangs over her bed with four feathers to represent her four brothers and sisters," a source says. "The dream catcher is to protect them."

Debunking stuttering myths

The King's Speech is winning praise from stutterers The speech impediment affects 70-million

A movie about a stuttering monarch, without sex, car chases or super heroes, hardly sounds like blockbuster box-office fare.

But in a less flashy way, The King's Speech is about a hero, one who battles an invisible enemy that torments nearly 70-million people around the world.

In demystifying the little-understood speech impediment, the film reveals myths and fascinating truths about stuttering, and has won praise from stutterers of all ages.

For Erik Yehl, an 11-year-old Chicago boy who began stuttering in preschool, the movie's message is, "I'm not stupid."

It's a stigma all people who stutter contend with — the notion that because their words sometimes sputter or fail to come out at all, their minds must be somehow mixed up.

"People who stutter — their minds are perfectly good, and they're not deaf, and they don't need to be told to breathe.

"...There are some things that most people think will help, but they don't. I'm hoping this movie will fix that."
ADIAN HARDY, WHO STUTTERS

breathe. What they need ... is to be listened to," said Susan Hardy, who saw the film with her son Aidan, a Chicago eighth-grader who also stutters.

Jane Fraser, president of the Stuttering Foundation of America, said the movie mirrors her experience growing up with a father who stuttered.

Malcolm Fraser formed the advocacy group in 1947 to raise awareness and provide resources for people who stutter.

"The impact for me was just bringing home 64 years of trying to get across to people how devastating this disorder is," Fraser's daughter said of seeing the movie.

Stuttering affects almost one per cent of the global population. It typically begins in early childhood as kids are learning to speak and is more common in boys.

About five per cent of children stutter, but most outgrow it. The condition tends to run in families and genes are thought to be involved in some cases.

The scant brain imaging research done on the impediment has suggested that different kinds of brain activity occur when people stutter than when they speak fluently.

Scientists aren't sure why, and also don't know why different activities induce fluency among some but not all stutterers, said Ehud Yairi, a prominent University of Illinois stuttering expert.

Speech therapist Stephanie Hirsh says she learned to control her own stuttering partly by using a breathing technique to maintain a continuous flow of air while talking.

Hirsh also offers this advice: Let stutterers know they have all the time they need to express themselves, and that you really want to hear what they have to say.

Film up for 12 Oscars on Feb. 27

The King's Speech depicts King George VI, father of the Queen, as a reluctant leader tortured by his stuttering. But with a sense of duty as England confronts a Second World War, he musters the courage to seek speech therapy to calm an anxious nation.

The movie and its actors have already won Golden Globes and other honours.

Give tea time a new meaning

Brew a cup of hot tea and pair it with your meal ◗ Cooking with the drink can also help to enhance food

DINNER EXPRESS

An afternoon cup of tea is often the perfect pick-me-up, but you don't have to brew a pot to enjoy its flavours. Creative cooks are putting tea into everything from salad dressings to desserts, and also using the beverage to enhance the flavours in their meal.

"We forget that we don't serve tea with meals that often, but tea pairings are done all over the world," says Toronto chef Therese DeGrace.

"Cooking with tea is a very easy thing to do because you just want to enhance its natural flavours," says DeGrace, who has developed a series of recipes using Four O'Clock tea produced by the Quebec company Trans-Herbe.

Because tea comes from various locations around the world it's a great source of exotic flavours.

"You want to have tea blends that will stand up to whatever foods you're cooking and that they marry well," DeGrace says.

For instance, the chef and owner of the hospitality consultancy Kitchen Culture suggests pairing a rich beef bourguignon with black tea.

"The tea would set the stew up in a gorgeous way, the same way a Merlot would or something rich."

Tea Tips

Here are some ideas for pairing tea and food from chef Therese DeGrace, owner of Kitchen Culture.

Green teas
"They're great with spicy dishes because they've got a nice flavour that is going to mellow out the heat."

Rooibos
"A roasted pork would be perfect for rooibos chai because pork has a distinct flavour and the tea is going to cut it."

Peppermint
"It's strong enough to stand up to something really tart, so it is a wonderful pairing for a dessert such as keylime pie."

Tea up your salad

Ingredients:

Goddess Greens
- 250 ml (1 cup) pea shoots
- 500 ml (2 cups) spinach
- 1 cucumber, finely diced
- 1 green apple, diced
- 500 ml (2 cups) shredded hearts of romaine
- 250 ml (1 cup) snow peas, cut thinly on a bias
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) raw sunflower seeds
- 250 ml (1 cup) radicchio

Green Tea, Jasmine and Lotus Tea Dressing
- 1 sachet green tea, jasmine and lotus flower tea that has been pulverized (remove from sachet)
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) organic full-fat yogurt
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) lemon juice
- 75 ml (1/3 cup) apple cider vinegar
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) vegetable oil
- Salt and pepper, to taste

Preparation:

1. In a bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients.
2. In a salad bowl, combine salad ingredients. Toss salad ingredients with dressing until well combined.

Black Tea-Infused Poached Pear

Packed with natural flavour, this dessert is low in fat, yet sweet enough to cap a meal.

The pears are also poached, then diced and tossed in a salad, says DeGrace. They can be made ahead of time, which is great if you're having a crowd over for dinner. The flavours will also infuse a bit more.

Preparation:

1. Infuse tea in boiling water for 6 minutes, then place in a large pot. Add remaining ingredients and bring to a boil, reduce heat to a simmer and add pears.
2. Cover surface of liquid with a piece of parchment paper to prevent pears from being unevenly poached. Cook for 20 minutes.
3. Carefully remove pears from liquid and set aside to cool. Return poaching liquid to the stove and increase heat. Continue cooking over medium heat until liquid is reduced to the consistency of maple syrup and lightly coat the back of a spoon, about 40 minutes.
4. Serve pears liberally drizzled with poaching syrup, fresh mint and mascarpone cheese.

CHEF THERESE DEGRACE

Ingredients:
- 4 sachets tiramisu black tea
- 2 l (8 cups) boiling water
- 250 ml (1 cup) sweet white wine
- 500 ml (2 cups) raw sugar
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 4 pears, peeled and cored
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) nutmeg
- 1 star anise
- Garnish: Fresh mint, kumquats and berries, mascarpone cheese

The water crisis

Experts are predicting urban water shortages are around the corner Here are six water saving tips

BEN KNIGHT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

ISTOCK PHOTO

Collecting rainwater to use for plant watering is a good way to conserve water.

By 2050, the number of human beings on Earth will have quadrupled in just 100 years. As global population continues to surge, fresh water is becoming an increasingly scarce — and precious — resource.

Compared to most other nations, Canadians use a vast amount of water — well over 300 litres per person, per day. That's more than any other country on Earth, except the United States.

Metro asked water-conservation expert Jerry Yudelson, author of Dry Run: Preventing the Next Urban Water Crisis, for six wise, effective ways to use less water more effectively.

1 Turn off the water when you brush your teeth.
"The first thing is to stop waste," Yudelson says. "When you're brushing your teeth or shaving, don't leave the water running. It's nothing dramatic, but it has a cumulative effect."

2 Install dual-flush toilets at home.
These innovative devices have two flush settings, depending on whether there is liquid or solids in the bowl.

"When I was growing up in the 70s we used to say 'if it's yellow, let it mellow," he notes.

3 Get a recirculating hot water system on a timer.
This clever bit of engineering eliminates the wait for hot water after you turn on the tap.

"It's a very simple plumbing intervention. Put a little pump on the water heater and – presto!"

4 Limit showers to four minutes.
"I take three-minute showers," Yudelson says. "And I guarantee you I'm still clean. With teenagers, install a coin-operated meter, so it takes a loonie or a toonie to take a shower longer than five minutes."

5 Use a drip irrigation system.
Significantly more water-efficient than sprinklers, drip irrigation allows water to seep directly to the roots of plants.

6 Harvest rainwater or graywater at home.
"Many households, historically, have captured rainwater in a cistern," he notes. "You can also collect graywater (used water from the sink, shower or laundry), filter it and use it for your lawn."

Two traditional gifts come to mind: flowers and chocolate. And it's not just Valentine's Day they have in common. You can find Fair Trade-certified versions of both in most parts of Canada.

Fair trade is based on a partnership between consumers and producers from the developing world, ultimately giving them a better deal and improved terms of trade. You're actually voting with your dollar and supporting farmers who are protected by a high level of ethical and economic standards.

Fair Trade certification ensures that producers and their families and communities in developing countries get an opportunity to improve their lives and plan for the future — and it helps the environment.

You'll also discover the label on other products like spices, sugar, rice, fruit and even soccer balls. Another simple way to green up your bouquet shopping skills year-round is to ask your florist for local, seasonal and organic flowers.

Many cut flowers are grown overseas in developing countries, where growers use toxic pesticides banned here in Canada.

And we don't test pesticide residues on flowers.

So tell your local florist that you'd love it if they supplied more flowers from local growers, free from pesticides.

HAVING A BALL WITH HIS NEW BUSINESS

"I'm sorry but we've decided to go in another direction." You sit in stunned disbelief and realize IT has happened to you. You are now unemployed.

James Milligan of Vancouver had worked at a major telecom company for 12 years when he was laid off. But it didn't take him long to get back on his feet.

A course in sustainability management allowed him to start his own company and make a difference in the lives of children around the world. Milligan is buying fair trade soccer balls from Pakistan and is helping to break the cycle of poverty by contributing to a fund where the workers can receive food, medical supplies and fresh water. His travels have led him to Uganda, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Mexico, where he is encouraging children to play soccer and discuss issues like post-conflict healing and domestic violence.

"I feel like I'm making a difference in a small way. I love my life right now."

Learn from James and other Canadians just like him. Take all of life's "pink slips" and turn them into new beginnings.

How does it work?

What are Fair Trade Certified Sports Balls?

- No child labour
- Fair treatment of workers
- Workers receive a decent wage
- Their working conditions are better than average
- None of the balls are made of leather

3 KEYS TO STAYING AHEAD OF THE PACK IN THE NEW ECONOMY

As the economy recovers, it's going to become even more important for you to keep your ears open, your eyes tuned and brush up your hard and soft skills. Here are three tips to help you get in front of the other job-seekers this year.

METRO

MOVE AWAY FROM THE TRADITIONAL RESUMÉ

- You were taught in college to create a resumé out of a Microsoft Word document. Times have changed, and you need to create a virtual resumé instead. First, complete your LinkedIn profile by filling out every field and asking for recommendations. Then, turn your profile into a resumé by going to resume.linkedinlabs.com.

BRUSH UP ON YOUR SOFT SKILLS

- A new Kelly Services research study of 100,000 people identified verbal communication as the most important skill for professionals. I also recommend having a strong work ethic, a positive attitude, problem-solving skills, team building skills and the ability to be flexible in work environments.

NETWORK ONLINE - THE RIGHT WAY

- Using social networks to get a job is a great idea only if you invest time in connecting with the right people instead of updating your status with the last meal you ate. Forty-four percent of people said that they unfollow in Twitter because they get too many updates, a SmartBrief.com report said.

Black history gets shine in new guide

THE CANADIAN PRESS/ADRIAN WYLD

▶ Former Governor General Michaëlle Jean is among those featured in the new Black History in Canada guide.

Students across the country are being provided with a primer on black history in Canada just in time for Black History Month.

The Historica-Dominion Institute is behind the Black History in Canada Education Guide, which has been shipped to more than 3,000 high schools. The institute is the country's largest charitable organization dedicated to Canadian history, identity and citizenship.

Jeremy Diamond, the institute's director of development and programs, said the idea stemmed from the success they had creating a similar campaign around Paul Gross's film Passchendaele a couple of years ago.

They encouraged the filmmakers to work with them on a public education campaign to help drive youngsters to the movies to learn more about the country's history and the First World War.

"What we wanted to do with this guide in a similar vein is to use a popular book, like The Book of Negroes, as a foray into learning about the experience of black history in Canada," Diamond said in a recent interview.

He said the guide focuses on the story of black Canadians and black history in Canada over 400 years, while drawing on Lawrence Hill's award-winning novel as an example of the black Canadian experience in the 19th century. The guide also includes a message from the author.

The Book of Negroes tells the story of an 11-year-old girl who is abducted from her village in West Africa and enslaved in North Carolina. She forges her way to freedom years later, serving the British in the Revolutionary War and registering her name in the Book of Negroes, a record of some 3,000 black Loyalists who left the U.S. to resettle in Nova Scotia.

Diamond said they use different subjects or themes such as slavery and human rights which they're able to draw from the book to explore the larger perspective of black history in Canada.

"We often think of the United States, we often think of the Civil War and slavery, but we have our own story here in Canada when it comes to black settlement," he said. "It's talked about in the book, and we expand on that as part of the guide to be used in the classroom."

The guide is supplemented with a website, blackhistorycanada.ca that has interactive learning tools and online resources. The guide is also accessible through the site.

It also features a timeline of key events, from the arrival in 1605 of Mathieu Da Costa, a translator for Samuel de Champlain thought to be the first black person on Canadian soil, to Michaëlle Jean becoming the country's first black governor general in 2005.

Talking to the teacher

Parent-teacher interviews can often be stressful and far from enlightening But they don't necessarily have to be either one of those things

Parent-teacher night can sometimes be the most dreaded night of the year, when you scramble to spend two minutes each with a half-dozen teachers who may not even know your kid's name.

If your kid's a straight A student, it probably won't be too painful — except for all the waiting. But if "needs improvement" was checked more than once on your child's report card, you could be in for a long, depressing night.

In fact, it can feel a little like speed-dating — except there's zero chance of love at first sight.

And it's so very different from elementary school, where one teacher, who spent as many waking hours with your child as you did, could hold forth for 15 minutes on your child's personality, talents and needs. Once kids get to Grade 6, a subject teacher may have 200 students in five different classes, and there's no time on parent-teacher night for more than a summary of how yours is faring.

"I find parent-teacher nights very stressful," said Virginia Anagnos, whose son is a sophomore at a New York City public high school.

Avoid saying...

Accusing, blaming and being confrontational tends to close the door of communication, says Roxanne Farwick Owens, who recommends against the following sentences:

- "My kid has always gotten straight As. What are you doing that is making him get an F?"
- "He says your class is so boring he can't stand to come to it. How can you expect him to pay attention?"

But she's come up with a good strategy for dealing with the "horse race." Report card in hand, she first identifies the subjects where her son scored the lowest grades, and signs up to see those teachers first.

"If the wait list is long, I identify other classes on the same floor to determine if I can see other teachers in the interim," she said. And she has her questions ready: Where can her son improve? What should he focus on at home? Are there websites or programs he should look into? How can she, as a parent, guide him?

Most important, "May I follow up with you via email in four weeks to check on his progress?"

Actor Michael Kelly is challenging teachers to get interactive with Shakespeare

About 10 years ago, actor Michael Kelly came up with an idea for a cool Shakespearean teaching tool.

What if he could share online videos of actors and drama teachers performing Shakespeare's works as a way to inspire budding thespians?

Technologically, the concept was a little ahead of its time but has finally been realized with Thursday's launch of the Shakespeare in Action Virtual Lab.

The website, shakespeareinactoion.org, which is free for students and teachers, includes lesson plans, videos of tutorials and rehearsal techniques, and a karaoke feature so students have a virtual partner to practice lines from Hamlet, Macbeth or Romeo and Juliet.

Kelly, a Toronto-based actor who has taught master classes for the Stratford Shakespeare Festival, says many teachers often find themselves out of their element when teaching Shakespeare, or helping to organize a drama production.

"They're obviously sometimes starved for resources and I think, in particular with Shakespeare, they're kind of left on their own," said Kelly, who founded the non-profit Shakespeare in Action in 1988 with a goal of exposing young audiences to Shakespearean works.

"If you're a teacher and you come out of university, no one teaches you how to teach Shakespeare. Maybe your major was English but so what? That doesn't mean you really know how to teach Shakespeare well and so you're sort of thrust into the classroom."

Rodgers returns Packers to glory

Bay hold off Steelers' late surge

31	25
PACKERS	STEELERS

Aaron Rodgers has turned the Green Bay Packers into Super Bowl champions once again.

Rodgers threw three touchdown passes and Nick Collins returned an interception for another, leading the Packers to a 31-25 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers last night.

This was Green Bay's fourth Super Bowl title. The Packers won the first two Super Bowls with Vince Lombardi coaching Bart Starr, and captured another with Brett Favre in January 1997.

The Steelers trailed 21-3 before halftime. Ben Roethlisberger got them to within 28-25 midway through the fourth quarter with a touchdown pass and a nifty two-point conversion. The Packers answered with a field goal, giving Roethlisberger one last chance.

Needing to go 87 yards in 1:59 with one timeout left, Roethlisberger couldn't make it across midfield.

This was only the second time Pittsburgh has lost a Super Bowl. The Steelers still have the most wins with six.

The crowd at Cowboys Stadium was 91,060 paying attendees, or 103,219 counting "credentialed attendees." It fell short of the record.

Green Bay led 21-17 after three quarters, but the Packers were without cornerbacks Charles Woodson and Sam Shields and receiver Donald Driver.

The Steelers had the momentum, the experience and the crowd — tens of thousands of fans making things tough for Rodgers to bark out signals at times.

But on the first play of the fourth, with Pittsburgh possibly driving for a go-ahead touchdown, Rashard Mendenhall fumbled on a hit by Clay Matthews Jr. The Packers took over at their own 45-yard line.

Jennings caught his second TD pass of the game to give the Packers a 28-17 lead with 11:57 to play — their third touchdown following a takeaway.

The Packers' final points came on a 23-yard field goal by Mason Crosby with 2:07 left.

If the playoffs started today, the champion Blackhawks (27-21-4) would be heading for the golf course. Jonathan Toews has been hot of late with seven points in his last three games.

Calgary (26-21-7) has been on a roll since Jay Feaster was named acting GM in late December. They have just one regulation loss in their last 10 games and are pushing to crack the top eight in the West.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 If you try to make the facts fit the conclusions you have already reached you will find yourself in trouble very quickly. Not everyone is as gullible as you sometimes like to think

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You seem to be extremely popular at the moment, and long may it continue, but could it be that some people are flattering you in the hope that they might get something out of it?

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You have never been one to follow the herd and you are not about to start now. The more others urge you to believe what everyone else believes the more you will resist the pressure to conform.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Your thinking seems to be a bit confused at the moment, so don't put too much trust in what your mind tells you.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You may be supremely confident of your abilities but even a Leo needs a helping hand once in a while – and you'll need it today. Don't just sit there looking pathetic hoping that someone will notice your plight.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You may be good at keeping secrets but you are also tempted to use what you know about a certain person to further your own interests.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 There are occasions when telling the truth can cause more problems than it solves. Before you open your mouth today ask yourself if a friend really wants to know what is going on behind their back.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 What seems like a nailed on fact early in the day may turn out to be a fantasy later on, so be careful what you allow yourself to believe. Just

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 What you hear today is only half what you need to know before you are in a position to make a decision, so don't let others pressure you into choosing too soon.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 A friend's ailment will remind you that health is precious and must be looked after. Start the week slowly and don't do anything risky.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Before agreeing to a deal or signing a contract make sure you will be able to deliver on time. If you are not 100 per cent certain you can do that it might be best to give it a miss.
